

Contributors

Pete Daniel retired in 2010 after 27 years at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, and he has also taught at several universities and worked for two years as an aide to a U.S. Senator. His seven books include Dispossession: Discrimination Against African American Farmers in the Age of Civil Rights (2013) and Lost Revolutions: The South in the 1950s (2000). He has served as president of the Society for History in the Federal Government, the Agricultural History Society, the Southern Historical Association, and the Organization of American Historians.

Ian J. Drake is an assistant professor in the Department of Political Science and Law at Montclair State University in New Jersey. He teaches in the areas of jurisprudence, political science, and history. He holds a Ph.D. in American history from the University of Maryland (2010) and a J.D. from the University of Richmond School of Law (1996). In addition to the history of tort law, Dr. Drake's current scholarly interests include a legal history of the treatment of animals in America. Prior to obtaining a Ph.D., Dr. Drake practiced in the areas of tort and insurance law.

Jamie C. Euken is a park guide with the National Park Service at National Capital Parks-East in Washington, DC. He earned an M.A. in History from The George Washington University in 2012, focusing on early 20th-Century American Political History. His Master's thesis, titled "Nature Fakers and the Hetch Hetchy Valley: Women in the Early Years of the Environmental Preservation Movement," explored the rhetoric used during the 1913 debate in Congress to approve the construction of a dam and reservoir in Yosemite National Park. Prior to joining the National Park Service, he worked for Members in both the U.S. House of Representatives and U.S. Senate, primarily on energy, environment, and natural resource policy.

Theresa L. Kraus is the FAA agency historian. In 2008, she published The Federal Aviation Administration: A Historical Perspective, 1903–2008. Prior to joining FAA in 1991, she worked for the U.S. Army Center of Military History where she co-authored and co-edited the Army's official history of Operations Desert Shield/Desert Storm, The Whirlwind War. She earned a Ph.D. in History from the University of Maryland, has numerous publications in military and aviation magazines and journals, and has authored several books/book chapters.

Brett Oppegaard is an assistant professor of communication at Washington State University Vancouver. He earned a Ph.D. in Technical Communication and Rhetoric at Texas Tech University. He received the regional and national 2012 George and Helen Hartzog Award for his research into mobile app development and media delivery systems within the National Park Service as well as the 2013 John Wesley Powell Prize for outstanding achievement in the field of historical displays. He was chosen for a National Endowment for the Arts fellowship as a journalist and later earned National Endowment for the Humanities grants as a scholar for his innovative mobile media projects. He now works in The Creative Media and Digital Culture program at WSU Vancouver, in partnership with The Edward R. Murrow College of Communication at WSU Pullman.

Natalie Schuster is an ABD student of United States political and environmental history at the University of Houston, Houston, Texas, where she is completing a dissertation tentatively titled “Political Disasters: The Politics of Federal Disaster Relief, 1927–2005.”

Gregory P. Shine is the chief ranger and historian for the National Park Service at Fort Vancouver National Historic Site in Vancouver, WA, and Oregon City, OR. He earned an M.A. in History from San Francisco State University. Shine also teaches public history at Portland State University and digital media at Washington State University Vancouver. He helped to pioneer the application of digital media in the National Park Service, working to help design and teach the bureau’s first nationwide digital media coursework. Shine has worked as a co-Project Manager for the Fort Vancouver Mobile project since its inception. The National Park Service’s Pacific West Region awarded Shine the 2013 Freeman Tilden Award for his work overseeing the writing, design, and digital publication of the NPS’ first interpretive iBook, “Revealing Our Past: A History of Nineteenth Century Vancouver Barracks through 25 Objects,” with his class of Public History Field School graduate students at Portland State University.

Christopher J. Young is an associate professor of History and director of the Center for Innovation and Scholarship in Teaching and Learning at Indiana University Northwest. He earned his Ph.D. at the University of Illinois at Chicago. His recent work includes “Barnet Hodes’s Quest to Remember Haym Salomon, the Almost-Forgotten Jewish Patriot of the American Revolution” (American Jewish Archives Journal) and “Minding the Realm: William Least Heat-Moon and the Blue Highways of Public Memory” (South Shore Journal).