

Contributors

Stephen D. Engle is professor of history and director of the Alan B. and Charna Larkin Symposium on the American Presidency at Florida Atlantic University. He specializes in 19th-century American history and has written extensively on the Civil War and Reconstruction, including most recently Gathering to Save a Nation, which explores federalism during the Civil War. This work received the 55th Baroness Lincoln Award. He is currently working on book that focuses on Massachusetts Governor John A. Andrew and the politics of race in the Civil War.

Frank Leith Jones is professor of Security Studies at the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, PA, where he holds the General George C. Marshall Chair of Military Studies. A retired Defense Department senior executive, he received his Ph.D. from Griffith University (School of Government and International Relations), in Queensland, Australia. He is the author of Blowtorch: Robert Komer, Vietnam and American Cold War Strategy, which the U.S. Commission on Military History awarded its Brigadier General James L. Collins Jr., Book Prize in Military History. He has published extensively in the areas of national security affairs, U.S. foreign policy, and military history. His current project examines Senator Sam Nunn's influence on U.S. defense policy and strategy.

Scott Mobley holds an M.A. and Ph.D. in History from the University of Wisconsin–Madison, where he currently serves as associate director of the Center for the Study of Liberal Democracy (CSLD). Mobley authored the book Progressives in Navy Blue: Maritime Strategy, American Empire, and the Transformation of U.S. Naval Identity, 1873–1898 (2018). He also co-edits Voices & Visions, an online reader that illuminates the history of U.S. foreign relations with primary media sources. A retired naval officer, Mobley graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy and holds an M.A. in National Security Affairs from the Naval Postgraduate School. Before joining CSLD, he taught at the Naval Academy as the Class of 1957 Post-doctoral Fellow in Naval Heritage.

Jessica R. Pliley is an associate professor of the history of Women, Genders, and Sexualities at Texas State University. She is the author of Policing Sexuality: The Mann Act and the Making of the FBI (Harvard University Press, 2014) and co-editor of Global Anti-vice Activism, 1890–1950: Fighting Drink, Drugs, and “Immorality” (Cambridge University Press, 2016). Her articles have appeared in the Journal of Women’s History, the Journal of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era, and the Journal of the History of Sexuality. She has been the co-organizer of the Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition’s Working Group on Modern Slavery and Trafficking at Yale University and is the book review editor of the Journal of Women’s History.

Stephen P. Randolph served for 27 years in the U.S. Air Force as a fighter pilot, instructor, and policy planner, with a deployment in Operation Desert Storm. In 2001 he became a professor of Military Strategy at the National Defense University, and thereafter department chair and associate dean. He earned a doctorate in History from the George Washington University in 2005, and wrote Powerful and Brutal Weapons: Nixon, Kissinger, and the Easter Offensive (Harvard University Press, 2007). He joined the State Department in 2011 as General Editor of the Foreign Relations series, and then served as The Historian, from April 2012 until his retirement in December 2017. He is now the Rokke-Fox Chair at the Center for Character and Leadership Development, U.S. Air Force Academy.

John H. Sprinkle, Jr., is the bureau historian in the National Park Service History Program in Washington, DC. After joining the NPS in 1998, he served in the National Historic Landmarks program and the Federal Preservation Institute. He holds a doctorate in U.S. history from the College of William and Mary and is an adjunct associate professor in the School of Architecture, Planning, and Historic Preservation at the University of Maryland. He is the author of Crafting Preservation Criteria: The National Register of Historic Places and American Historic Preservation (2014) and Saving Spaces: Historic Land Conservation in the United States (2018). His next book will examine the relationship between the historic preservation movement and the civil rights movement after 1966.

Jeff Strickland teaches courses on slavery, the Civil War and Reconstruction, and U.S. Public Health at Montclair State University. He is the author of Unequal Freedoms: Race, Ethnicity, and White Supremacy in Civil War-Era Charleston (University Press of Florida, 2015). He is writing a book titled All for Liberty: The Charleston Workhouse Slave Rebellion of 1849.