

Contributors

William P. Barry retired as NASA's sixth Chief Historian in July 2020. He served in the U.S. Air Force for 22 years, alternating between pilot duties in the KC-135 and teaching on the faculty at the Air Force Academy. Upon retirement from the Air Force in 2001, he began work in NASA's international relations office. Later, he served as the NASA European Representative at the U.S. Embassy in Paris from 2007 to 2010. He was appointed Chief Historian in 2010. A graduate of the U.S. Air Force Academy (1979). He also holds a Masters Degree from Stanford University (1987) and a Doctorate from Oxford University (1996).

Sean T. Byrnes is a senior instructor of History at Western Governors University and an adjunct associate professor at the University of Maryland Global Campus. He is the author of Disunited Nations: US Foreign Policy, Anti-Americanism and the Rise of the New Right (LSU, 2021) and is currently working on two books: The United States and the Ends of Empire: Decolonization, Hierarchy, and World Order since 1776 with Bloomsbury Academic and No Guarantee: The Family Assistance Plan and the Transformation of American Politics, 1968–1972 with LSU Press. His writing has appeared in Jacobin and The New Republic. He holds a Ph.D. in history from Emory University.

Katlyn Marie Carter is an assistant professor of History at the University of Notre Dame where she teaches classes on early American history, the Constitution, and media history. She is the author of Democracy in Darkness: Secrecy and Transparency in the Age of Revolutions (Yale University Press, 2023) and has published in the Journal of the Early Republic, French History, the Washington Post, and the Age of Revolutions blog, where she is also an editor.

Saul Cornell is the Paul and Diane Guenther Chair in American History at Fordham University. He specializes in early American history and legal/Constitutional history. He is the author of The Other Founders: Anti-Federalism and the Dissenting Tradition in America, 1788–1828 (1999) and A Well Regulated Militia: The Founding Fathers and the Origins of Gun Control in America (2006), among other works, and co-author of The Partisan Republic: Democracy, Exclusion, and the Fall of the Founders Constitution, 1780s–1830s. He has published widely in top law reviews and legal history journals and is a leading authority on the Second Amendment and the history of gun regulation.

Matthew Crow is associate professor and chair of History and of Law and Society at Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva, NY. He is the author of Thomas Jefferson, Legal History, and the Art of Recollection (Cambridge, 2017), and he is finishing a second book on Herman Melville, legal theory, and the idea of oceanic history.

Amanda C. Demmer is an associate professor of history at Virginia Tech. She researches and teaches about war, diplomacy, and migration. Her first book, After Saigon's Fall: Refugees and U.S.-Vietnamese Relations, 1975–2000, was published in 2021 with Cambridge University Press. In addition to authoring a variety of articles and chapters, her work has appeared in the Washington Post, the New York Times, Forbes, CBS News, Apple News Today, and other outlets. Her next book project, tentatively titled America and the World: The Politics of Recognition and Normalization in U.S. History, will trace recognition as a tool of U.S. statecraft from 1776 to the present.

Graham G. Dodds is a professor of Political Science at Concordia University in Montreal, Canada. He earned a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania and has worked at the Brookings Institution and for a member of the U.S. House of Representatives. Much of his research concerns American political development, particularly the presidency. He is the author of dozens of publications, including three books: Mass Pardons in America (2021) explores the presidential use of amnesties after domestic rebellions, The Unitary Presidency (2019) analyzes the controversial unitary executive theory, and Take Up Your Pen (2013) examines the evolution of executive orders.

Michael Franczak is a Research Fellow in Climate and Sustainable Development at the International Peace Institute and Visiting Fellow in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Pennsylvania. He previously held postdoctoral fellowships at Penn (2020–22) and Yale (2018–20) and is the author of Global Inequality and American Foreign Policy in the 1970s (Cornell University Press, 2022). He is active in global climate change negotiations under the UN Framework Convention as an advisor to small-island developing states, and is the author of several reports on climate finance and loss and damage.

Ryan Irwin is an associate professor of history at the University at Albany-SUNY, where he teaches about the United States and the World. His writing explores the relationship between U.S. power, global governance, and decolonization. He is the author of Gordian Knot: Apartheid and the Unmaking of the Liberal World Order (2012), and he is writing a book about federalism and American empire in the mid-20th century.

Laura Kolar is a historian in the Office of the Historian at the U.S. Department of State where she provides historical context and analysis to policymakers covering East Asia and the Pacific regions. She previously worked on the Foreign Relations of the United States series; as a Foreign Affairs Officer in the Office of Ocean and Polar Affairs in the Bureau of Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs facilitating intergovernmental cooperation around challenges in the Atlantic, including climate change, sustainable economic development, and maritime security; and on a detail covering Africa in the Office of Agricultural Policy in the Bureau of Economic and Business Affairs. She received her Ph.D. in modern United States history from the University of Virginia in 2011.

Gerald Leonard is Professor of Law at Boston University. He is the author of The Partisan Republic: Democracy, Exclusion, and the Fall of the Founders' Constitution, 1780s–1830s, with Saul Cornell (Cambridge University Press, 2019), and The Invention of Party Politics: Federalism, Popular Sovereignty, and Constitutional Development in Jacksonian Illinois (University of North Carolina Press, Studies in Legal History, 2002). For the American Historical Association, he co-edited, with Keith Whittington, a series of 10 pamphlets covering the sweep of U.S. constitutional history under the title New Essays on American Constitutional History (2009–2018). He has also published a number of articles on American legal and constitutional history and on American criminal law.

Jessica K. Lowe is a scholar of early American law and history and the author of Murder in the Shenandoah: Making Law Sovereign in Revolutionary Virginia (Cambridge University Press, 2019), a finalist for the 2019 Langum Prize for best book in American Legal History. She is a Visiting Scholar at the University of Virginia School of Law, where she has been affiliated since 2012. Lowe holds a Ph.D. from Princeton University, a J.D. cum laude from Harvard Law School, and studied at Yale Divinity School. Lowe previously clerked for the District of Connecticut and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, and practiced law in Washington, D.C., where she worked on several cases before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Simon Miles is assistant professor in the Sanford School of Public Policy at Duke University. He is the author of Engaging the Evil Empire: Washington, Moscow, and the Beginning of the End of the Cold War, published by Cornell University Press in October 2020; of articles in Diplomacy and Statecraft, Diplomatic History, International Security, the Journal of Cold War Studies, and Slavic Review; and commentary in Foreign Policy, the Globe and Mail, War on the Rocks, and the Washington Post. His current project, On Guard for Peace and Socialism, is an international history of the Warsaw Pact, forthcoming from Princeton University Press.

Umüt Özsu is an associate professor of law and legal studies at Carleton University. He is the author of Formalizing Displacement: International Law and Population Transfers (Oxford, 2015) and Completing Humanity: The International Law of Decolonization, 1960–82 (Cambridge, 2023).

Lisa K. Parshall is a professor of Political Science at Daemen University and a Policy Fellow at the Nelson A. Rockefeller Institute of Government in Albany. She is the author of several books and multiple law review articles and policy reports. Her most recent book, In Local Hands: Village Government Incorporation and Dissolution in New York State, was published by SUNY Press. She is the past president and current secretary of the Northeastern Political Science Association. Parshall holds a doctorate and a master's degree in political science, both from the University at Buffalo (SUNY), and a bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse.

Lawrence A. Peskin is a professor of History at Morgan State University. He is the author of Manufacturing Revolution: The Intellectual Origins of American Industry (2003) and Captives and Countrymen: Barbary Slavery and the American Public 1785–1816 (2009). His newest book, Three Consuls: Capitalism, Empire, and the Rise and Fall of America's Mediterranean Community, 1776–1840 is forthcoming from Cambridge University Press.

Chris Rasmussen is an assistant professor of history at the University of Guam. He received a Ph.D. in American History from the University of Nebraska Lincoln. Rasmussen's recent publications include "A Whole Network of Friends: Doris Twitchell-Allen's Children's International Summer Villages and American Peacemaking in the Cold War," The Journal of the History of Youth and Childhood, Spring 2021, and "From Tourists to Asylees: Russian Citizens in Guam, 2012–2021," in Pacific Asia Inquiry, Vol. 12, Fall 2021. He is currently working on a study of Great Plains writers and the New Deal.

Stephen J. Rockwell is a professor of Political Science at St. Joseph's University, New York. His new book is The Presidency and the American State: Leadership and Decision Making in the Adams, Grant, and Taft Administrations (University of Virginia Press/Miller Center on the Presidency, 2023). He is also the author of Indian Affairs and the Administrative State in the Nineteenth Century (Cambridge University Press, 2010); the essay How Big Government Won the West (2013); and the chapter “Indian Affairs and the Relentless American State” in Washington’s Government: Charting the Origins of the Federal Administration, ed. Max M. Edling and Peter J. Kastor (University of Virginia Press, 2021).

Simeon Andonov Simeonov is associate professor of History at the American University in Bulgaria and the Institute of Balkan Studies at the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences. His articles have appeared in Journal of the Early Republic, Diplomatic History, Journal of Global Slavery, Journal of Global History, and Atlantic Studies. His current project, Empire of Consuls, is an Atlantic history of consular establishments.

Lauren F. Turek is an associate professor of history at Trinity University in San Antonio, TX, where she teaches courses on modern United States history, U.S. foreign relations, and public history and serves as director of the Museum Studies minor and as director of the Diplomacy, Security, War, and Peace Studies concentration in the International Studies department. Her first book, To Bring the Good News to All Nations: Evangelical Influence on Human Rights and U.S. Foreign Relations, was published in 2020 with Cornell University Press. She has published articles on religion in American politics and foreign relations in Diplomatic History, the Journal of American Studies, and Religions and has contributed chapters to several edited volumes.

David E. Wilkins is a citizen of the Lumbee Nation and holds the E. Claiborne Robins Distinguished Professorship in Leadership Studies at the University of Richmond. He earned his Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of North Carolina/Chapel Hill in December 1990. He is the author or editor of several books, including Documents of Native American Political Development: 1933 to Present (2019); Red Prophet: The Punishing Intellectualism of Vine Deloria, Jr. (2018); Dismembered: Native Disenrollment and the Battle for Basic Human Rights (with Shelly Hulse Wilkins, 2017); and Documents of Native American Political Development: 1533 to 1933 (2009). His articles have appeared in a range of social science, law, history, and ethnic studies journals.